Nicholas Fuller is an Australian designer/maker whose work reflects a commitment to high quality craftsmanship and a passion for enriching everyday living through considered design. Greatly influenced by a childhood spent working in his father's fitting workshop on lathes and milling machines, Nicholas has been committed to understanding the process and hallmarks of good design from an early age.

The process taken when designing product, commissions and limited edition collectable pieces is lengthy and considered. Culminating in the creation of work that is innovative, original and displays high-end craft based skills in a contemporary way. The process starts with sketches and scaled models through to 1:1 mock-up components and then on to full scale prototypes before crafting the final piece. This ensures the highest level of work and allows quality control through every stage of the process.
